Environmentally Preferred Solutions

In this section you will find a wide assortment of towel and tissue products marked with a Green Leaf . They have been identified as eco-friendly based on a number of criteria. The LEED EB: O&M standard calls for janitorial papers to meet one of three requirements to be considered green: sanitary papers may be derived from rapidly renewable resources or made from non-tree fiber; comply with EPA Guidelines for post-consumer recycle content; or be certified by Green Seal or EcoLogo.

Portion controlled and/or touch-free dispensing and source reduction packaging are other attributes that enhance the environmental favorability of your towel & tissue selection.

EPA Guidelines for Post-Consumer Recycled Content:

ITEM	POST-CONSUMER FIBER
Bathroom Tissue	20 – 60 %
Paper Towels	40 – 60 %
Paper Napkins	30 – 60 %
Facial Tissue	10 – 15 %
General Purpose Industrial Wipers	40 %

Although the above guidelines are a good starting point for evaluating the attributes of the product, they may not be the only criteria, especially when it comes to evaluating the green bona fides of a product. Other factors to consider could be distance products have to travel to your facility, as well as efficiency in use. If a product is perceived to be greener than an alternative, but one needs to use more of it in order to satisfy a need, its green benefits may be negated by increased quantity being used.

Perceived quality and cost should also factor into the equation. Although not environmental attributes, these factors, nonetheless, play an important role in customer satisfaction and operational cost.

Environmentally Preferred Solutions

The assortment of Hand Cleaners we offer includes hand hygiene products that are considered green. They are marked with the 'Green Leaf' symbol. Hand soaps are defined to be green in the 2009 LEED EB: O&M standard, if they do not contain antimicrobial agents, unless required by health codes or other regulations (food service and health care requirements). Hand soaps certified by Green Seal (GS-41, for industrial and institutional hand cleaners) and EcoLogo (Environmental Choice CCD-104, for hand cleaners and hand soaps) are also regarded environmentally preferable. Our green skin care product selections meet these standards and are offered with portion control dispensers. Touch-Free dispensers are also available to reduce the potential for cross-contamination.

PUR Value garbage can liners contain 100% recycled content, some <sup>(A)</sup> with 20% post-consumer recycled content, meeting the EPA standards, as well as being compostable to ASTM standards. Select products <sup>(B)</sup> are EcoLogo certified to EcoLogo CCD-126.

PUR Value can liners contain a complex additive which is crucial to their degradation process. This additive does not affect the quality and strength of the product and contains no proscribed heavy metals. Only 10-15% of original plastic mass remains after 5 years when the product remains exposed to oxygen.

Berry' Plastics' degradable liners contain a special oxo-biodegradable additive that stimulates photodegradation (UV) and oxidation, meeting ASTM standards D5510 and D5208. When exposed to UV light, heat and oxygen, this two-step process breaks down the plastic into small fragments, which are then able to degrade.

Give your take-out dishes a green twist

Cascades' ecoBistro™ line includes a variety of packaging products, made for the fast-food market, that are practical, resistant and appealing. Furthermore, the ecoBistro™ packaging is manufactured using paperboard that is made with recycled fibres, making this new line of products the best environmentally sound alternative to traditional fast-food containers or ones that are poly-coated.

eco BISTRO

ecoBistro™, an environmentally sound choice

To reduce its environmental footprint and to maintain its leadership in sustainable development, Cascades is proud to present ecoBistro™, a packaging line for take-out food, made from recycled fibres containing up to 60% post consumer fibers.

Besides having a high recycled fibre content, these paperboards are resistant, durable and are printed with environmental inks that are extremely low in V.O.C.

Environmentally Preferred Solutions

When looking for an ice melter that is safer to the environment by being less harmful to outside vegetation or inert, you may consider the following two options.

One is the use of Calcium Magnesium Acetate (CMA). It was identified by the Federal Highway Administration of U.S. Department of Transportation as the only low-corrosion chemical alternative to road salt that also protects the environment. When absorbed into the soil, CMA's calcium and magnesium components benefit the soil structure, just as liming a garden improves permeability. The acetate portion of CMA biodegrades naturally. See item# 158109 EnvironMelt.

Another option is the use of an inert substance that may not melt ice, but will provide traction for otherwise slippery surfaces. See EcoTraction.

Hand Cleaners

Hand hygiene plays an important role in any green program.

Hand soaps that do not contain antimicrobial agents, unless required by health codes or other regulations (food service and health care requirements), are defined to be green in the 2009 LEED EB: O&M standard. Hand soaps certified by Green Seal (GS-41, for industrial and institutional hand cleaners) and EcoLogo (Environmental Choice CCD-104, for hand cleaners and hand soaps) are also acceptable. The green skin care product selections meet these standards and are offered with portion-controlled dispensers. Touch free dispensers are also available to reduce the potential for cross-contamination.

Towels, Tissues & Wipers

The LEED EB: O&M standard calls for janitorial papers to meet one of three standards to be considered green. Sanitary papers may be derived from rapidly renewable resources or made from non-tree fiber; comply with EPA Guidelines for post-consumer recycle content; or be certified by Green Seal or EcoLogo.

Portion controlled and/or touch-free dispensing and source reduction packaging are other green attributes that enhance the environmental favorability of your towel & tissue selection.

EPA Guidelines for Post-Consumer Recycled Content:

ITEM	POST-CONSUMER FIBER
Bathroom Tissue	20 – 60 %
Paper Towels	40 – 60 %
Paper Napkins	30 – 60 %
Facial Tissue	10 – 15 %
General Purpose Industrial Wipers	40 %

When making product selections, although the EPA Guidelines are a good starting point for evaluating the attributes of the product, they may not be the only criteria, especially when it comes to evaluating the green bona fides of a product.

Depending on your organization's specific environmental drivers, other factors to consider could be distance from your facility to the mill, as well as efficiency in use. If a product is perceived to be greener than an alternative, but one needs to use more of it in order to satisfy a need, its green benefits may be negated by increased product being used.

Perceived quality and cost should also factor into the equation. Although not environmental attributes, these factors nonetheless, play an important role in customer satisfaction and operational cost.
